

also pay the price in a short, if brilliant, career. The spitter demands oceans of speed, and because of the use of saliva it soon wears out the pitcher's arm. Walsh is through—and baseball men say he is the victim of his pet delivery.

MARSHALL DENOUNCES CHARGE AGAINST HIM AS "FAKED"

Pontiac, Ill., Nov. 13.—Dr. Jas. A. Marshall, deposed physician of the Illinois state reformatory here, interrupted his trial before the state civil service commission by springing to his feet and denouncing the charges of cruelty made against him as "faked."

Marshall grew angry when Edward Scoval, former inmate of the institution, who is now an officer, refused to answer questions about his former life.

"I am asking for fair treatment at the hands of this commission," said Marshall, "and I do not think it right for ex-convicts to withhold their names and characters from this board. If I am not going to get fair treatment I will quit this trial right now."

Chaplain E. W. Annable corroborated the testimony of George Wolf, an inmate who swore he was knocked down with a blackjack by Guard Robb in the presence of Marshall, but declared he never heard Marshall use obscene or profane language.

The chaplain said that several boys had complained to him of receiving brutal treatment at the hands of Dr. Marshall, and had offered bruised faces and swollen hands as evidence, but that he had no direct knowledge of such cruelty.

LEWINSOHN IN BAD

The troubles of Sol Lewinsohn, missing banker and bondsman, were further increased when Federal Judge Landis ordered the forfeiture of two bonds that Lewinsohn had signed.

The bonds had been furnished for Jean Mattieu, charged with violation of the white slave law, whose bond was for $2,000, and Spiros Cosmos, charged with violation of the immigration law, whose bail was $1,000. Both have disappeared.

Mrs. Hanah Tremmerling, Edward Brierly and William Auschutz took another wallop at Lewinsohn by filing involuntary petitions against him.

"Once in my travels I came across a tribe of wild women who had no tongues."

"Goodness! How could they talk?"

"They couldn't. That's what made them wild."

TO BE "GIVEN" IN MARRIAGE

"I am glad that foolish question, used when the woman was a chattel and handed from one man to another, is still in the marriage service. I want to feel that I am 'GIVEN'—and that I am His until death do us part."—From "The Confessions of a Wife," the first chapter of which will be printed in The Day Book next Monday, Nov. 17. This wonderful diary of a married woman will continue daily thereafter.
